George Bird Evans and Kay, his wife, purchased the farm at a sheriff's sale in 1939. He named the land Old Hemlock for the virgin hemlocks which he saved from a logger's saw. There were open pastures and fields for corn, wheat, hay and buckwheat. They rented these fields to local farmers until the mid-1950's. At that time George and Kay planted white pines, red pines, red spruce, hemlocks and larches while allowing successional plants to reclaim the farm.
